WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED

Churches are excited to learn. Church leaders who have been trained have shared knowledge with other stakeholders Finding foster care/adoptive parents is much harder to achieve than kinship care

Once taught, Church leaders are beginning to work with local leaders to tackle child safeguarding issues in their communities. Families have unrealistic expectations from CRANE because they have seen easy handouts from other stakeholders Children's Homes are struggling to get formal registration with the Ministry of Gender

CHILD PROFILE

My name is Dora. I live with my grandmother, 3 sisters and 2 brothers. All four girls are in school, thanks to CRANE. After 3 years of sitting at home, I am glad that I was able to go back to school. I am now pursuing my career ambition to be a fashion designer. My vocational college now has more equipment which has been provided by CRANE. CRANE has created a partnership between the school and vocational college. The school still has challenges with accessing water and has too few teachers.

Since I joined the CLC, I have gained different skills and my self-esteem and resilience has been built. I can now make sanitary pads, knit and train other girls. I have also learnt about children's rights. I am more responsible.

My family doesn't need to worry anymore about my fees. We are saving; my grandmother is a part of the CLC savings group. Family learning days, positive parenting, savings groups and mother-daughter clubs have had a great impact on my family's wellbeing. Since CRANE came in my community, many girls and teenage mothers are back in school. I hope that more girls will be given a chance to go back to school through the CLC as Marijuana is a real problem in my community.

WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED

The investment in co-curricular activities like Music, Dance, Drama and Sports enhances learning in the classroom

Integrating life skills into literacy and numeracy teaching is helping to prepare girls for employment.

Creating parents' networks across project areas is creating markets for their products

Video evidence from children can now be used in court thanks to CRANE's work with the ODPP

Schools are responsive to adapting management when they are helped with simple step-by-step toolkits.

CHILD PROFILE

I went through the CLC and gained knowledge in numeracy and literacy and now tailoring skills in my further studies. I want to learn baking and computer skills so that I can have a variety of skills for self-sustenance.

The teaching in the CLC and the school has changed greatly, with a focus on practical skills. I also know about children's rights, and my family has been transformed through the savings group. I have been motivated, encouraged and advised when in a CRANE Holiday Camp.

There is reduced domestic violence, teenage pregnancies and sexual harassment in my community. I would love to see other children from my community also join school again and leaving behind drug farming, allowing them to study in a CLC for at least a year.

WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED

Our impact is greater when we work with local artists and music producers in making children's productions Training and psychosocial support of social workers helps them to work through their own issues In order for reintegration to be successful, all stakeholders must work together for the best interest of the child Empowering duty bearers to understand their roles and responsibilities is critical in ensuring that children access their rights It takes time for behavioural change to take root so we have to be involved in our empowerment activities

5 cases were committed on remand, 34 are still in court process, 9 are at police. In total there are 48 cases in the legal system.

JUSTICE PREVAILED!

We are delighted that a girl with intellectual disabilities who was being abused by a neighbour has been given justice after the perpetrator was given a 7-year prison sentence in November. This is the first time a child with intellectual disabilities in Uganda has won justice in the Ugandan courts! This was possible because the CRANE Member, Secretariat, Police and Prosecution Service were able to work together.

CHURCH PROFILE

I am the Pastor of Peniel Christian Foundation. Many of our families have been strengthened through the work of CRANE. We have learned how to prevent child abuse by advocating for children's rights and have been helped to follow up on cases. We have worked on relationships between parents and children. Of course not all parents are compliant, but the rate of abuse in homes has dropped. Children are also more aware of their rights and responsibilities. We would like to see more implementation of the laws that protect children and to see more of an emphasis on the role of the parent in a child's life.

The savings group that CRANE helped to start has given improved financial stability for our families. it has helped to build trust and unity amongst parents. We still feel like we need to understand more about how to empower women who have no stable source of income.

The church has also been helped to develop policies that protect children and vulnerable adults. We still need to learn how to support children with special needs and how to engage and counsel disaffected youths and adults.

Through using our strategic documents, by surveying and interviewing our staff, partner networks and their members, and seeing the work first-hand in Uganda and Honduras, Sagamore was able to piece together a picture of Viva's impact across 28 countries.

 94% of leaders of individual network member organisations had increased the number of vulnerable children served, specifically as a result of their involvement in the network

88% of individual members said that being part of a network has helped them avoid implementing a sophisticated strategy for tackling the massive and complex challenges facing vulnerable children worldwide. This strategy is leveraging the power of grassroots networks to multiply the scale and reach of services for these children; improve service quality; nurture changes in cultural attitudes that devalue children; and enhance influence on public policy reforms that can bring about changes to the underlying, systemic causes

CRANE'S BACKGROUND

CRANE is passionate about keeping every child and every adult beneficiary safe. Together we are a network of over 3,000 workers from 140 organisations, schools and churches who are working together for children. We can count 73,693 children at risk who are being directly impacted by CRANE. CRANE will continue to bring together child care workers, duty bearers and other stakeholders for collaborative action so that we will see transformational change in the lives of children at risk.

Together we want to ensure 3 main outcomes for every child:

- Every child is in a Family
- Every child is in a Safe Space
